Eric's classroom has a pet goldfish. Each week, one child is chosen to feed the fish every day. It is a big responsibility, because the fish have to be fed regularly and given the correct amount of food. Too much food can kill the fish. Last week, Eric fed the fish. On Monday, Eric got confused and fed the fish, forgetting that Anne was in charge of the task this week. On Tuesday, the teacher announced that one of the fish had died. The whole class was upset about the loss. Eric thinks he may be responsible, because he fed the fish a second time on Monday. Should he tell someone? What would you do? Do you think Eric did anything wrong? What will the other children do if Eric admits to his mistake?
