You are watching some kids in your grade play basketball at the gym. A skinny boy with glasses tries to shoot a basket but ends up falling on his face. His glasses break. Some bigger kids begin to laugh at him. The boy can’t see very well without his glasses. You want to help him up, but if you do, the other kids may laugh at you, too. How would you feel? What should you do?

________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________

©2003 abcteach.com