	“Student voice deserves a seat at the table to design ideas that will transform their education. As adults, we can’t recreate their thinking—and why would we? Their insights add an invaluable perspective that we can’t replicate. Students need to be included, not only at the beginning of the process but throughout. Their contributions go beyond having great ideas, too. Involving students in the ongoing design and decision-making systems puts pressure on school systems to think differently and invest in ideas that matter to their communities.” Think thoughtfully about the following questions – ask your school peers for input: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • What suggestions would you offer your school and district leaders about how to work with you? • Are there any new projects that member schools would like to address for presentation consideration? • How can you disseminate information from the SSAC back to your schools?
